Revival Of Military

They stand straight. They sweat hard. They speak with high patriotism.

They are Marines.

And, increasingly, they are students. With more than a decade silencing the voices of Vietnam protestors on campus, students are heading off to Quantico, Virginia for programs such as Technical Basic School and Officer Candidate School, with more pride and more respect from their classmates.

In the age of terrorism, the placement of American forces overseas may still be questioned, but the need to protect civilians is clearer. And a changing public personna is reflected at College Park.

In 1970, following the U.S. invasion of Cambodia, 4,000 University of Maryland students went on a rampage, setting fires, smashing windows and blocking Route One. In the fall of 1986-87, campus students re-elected a full-fledged crew-cut Marine as Student Government Association president.

For the students who join up, terrorism becomes a familiar word.

In "Combat Town" on the Quantico base; the men learn the anti-terrorism techniques of urban warfare; holding an area against aggressors or launching a successful takeover.

In the cold light of a winter training day, figures scale bomb-shattered buildings, "crash" through glassless windows, swarm hallways. Others, sprawled on their bellies on the hills around the mock town- a set of bare cinder block buildings and towers set in a green hollow-practice tactics for a night raid.

"The yellow cat walks quickly," says a soldier to a waiting sentry. The sentence contains the correct password; guns lower and the man crawls to his position.

It is the eve of a trial run for a three-day war. These novices in the "nation's finest fighting force" began to sweat their way into the company of the few and the proud.

Student Fashion & Design

Maryland Senior, Hamere Demissie, is a Fashion Design Major. Hamere is originally from Ethiopia, where she graduated from high school when she was fifteen years old. Hamere has also attended school in England and hopes to return to Europe to work for a designer after she receives her graduate degree from NYC's Fashion Institute of Technology. She hopes to go to either France or Italy where her favorite designers, Karl Lagerfelb and Armani, are from. Hamere's clothes are generally classic looks with an avant-garde touch to them. She usually uses solid neutral colors, and has long smooth lines, generally to the ankle. She has not yet begun to design men's clothing but she plans to in the near future. Hamere also plans to have her own line of clothes in the future.

The first view I got of the University of Maryland was from an overloaded station-wagon headed down Route One. It was 1984 and I was one of over four-thousand wide-eyed freshman getting their first blurry glimpse of the giant "M", the chapel, and the practicing band. One look at the stores restaurants and bars that lined the roadside and this Connecticut girl was hooked.I remember thinking College Park was perfect, not sickeningly quaint like some supposed college communities, but busy and boisterous as any decent college town should be. The crowd attested to this fact. There were students everywhere, buying books, joking as they crossed the road. I couldn't wait to be one of them.

So what is it about the Route that makes it such an integral part of college life? Not much if one thinks of college in merely academic terms. There is Campus Books where students have their first exposure to the infamous College Park lines. There's also Kinko's which recently ended the nightmares of procastinating students by expanding its hours around the clock. That's probably where the answer lies. The Route is so important to college students because its proprietors chose to make it so. Convenience is the key. We may not have a Bloomingdales, but the basic necessities of life are more than adequately provided for in the College Park Shopping Plaza. Even the most discriminating shoppers agree that at the very least, the "mall's" parking lot comes in handy for parking unregistered cars. Stacey Slovin, a waitress at the Bagel Place summed it up. "We cater to the college student." Expanded hours during finals week and discount coupons featured in the Diamondback may not seem like much, but it's enough to make the Bagel Place a College Park favorite.

The Route takes on a new significance when one admits that college is a place of social as well as academic growth. The extent of this is seen after dark. It's nine o'clock on a Friday night and there's a small line forming outside Sovran Bank's computer teller. This is a tiny microcosm of what will be occurring at the 'Vous and the Cellar later that night. It's not uncommon to wait over an hour to get in the 'Vous on a good night but never fear, time flies for the innovative student who sent his friend to Gourmet for a six-pack. Many wonder at the sanity of those who brave rain wind, and snow to eventually have their feet stuck to the floor and a pitcher splashed on their heads. Somehow the thrill of yelling "Tequila!" at the right moment just doesn't explain it. Two bouncers from Sante Fe sum it up, "It's wild and it's cheap."

There are several less traditional options for the partying student not quite up to facing the ruckus of the 'Vous. Sante Fe Cafe, opened June 17 and is the new kid on the block. Smartly decorated and spacious it is described by one bouncer as the kind of place you bring a date. (In other words the music is actually low enough to maintain a conversation.) People dress for a night at Sante Fe. This position as the center of "haute couteur" in College Park is maintained by a "dress code" stipulating no cut-offs and no tank shirts. A promising addition for the well-dressed dancers of the area is a dance floor which should be completed shortly.

Bentley's asserts its pride of being part of the campus community by purposely employing mostly college students. Mainly patroned by regulars, Bentley's prides itself on its clean, friendly atmosphere. The crowd is somewhat older, including many graduate students and definitely less wild than its neighboring 'Vous.

The Route's variety oftern causes clashes among students who often disagree about which is the "in" place to be. All could be settled if one realizes that one man's slimey or jappy is another man's partying paradise. More openminded individuls escape this problem by doing the Route circuit. A graphic depiction can be seen on the "Certified bar-hopper" T-shirts, which display a tottering Terp, straddling the Route between the four major drinking establishments. And why not? The similarities are there. All interviewed insisted that their bars are not pick-up joints and absolutely, positively do not accept fake I.D.s Only the most cynical won't believe the pubescent looking "21" year-old couples stumbling homeward at 2 am haven't known each other for ages. Yes, the Route is definitely a unifying factor. This is life in the fast lane, and for over 30,000 students it's more than they could ask for.

One of the strangest moments at the spring Art Attack transpired as Campus police arrested University College student Damon Norko at the Art Attack festival on McKeldin Library Mall May 2 and charged him with disorderly conduct and assault on a police officer among other charges.

The incident began when Norko, a poet and lead singer of the rock group Submensas, made an unscheduled appearance on stage and began reading poetry.

When technicians turned up the sound system, witnesses said Norko got violent — allegedly yanking speaker cords, slapping a festival organizer and running around shouting "Art Attack," before a police officer tackled him in a mock graveyard.

Several witnesses acknowledged that Norko was kicking and struggling but said he did not strike the police officer. Norko is scheduled to stand trial later.

NIGHT

NIGHTLINE ON CAMPUS

With the hope of setting the record straight, Chancellor John Slaughter invited Ted Koppel and the "Nightline" newsteam to campus to discuss the state of college athletics, academics and drugs.

Tawes Theatre was standing room only for students, administrators and coaches from Maryland and neighboring universities.

Panelists, including Slaughter, discussed academics and athletics during the first hour, which was broadcast live nationally. Drug use dominated discussion during the taped second session, which was broadcast to TV viewers the next evening.

Discussion also touched on revenue earned from athletic programs, cheating in the recruiting system and adequate drug education programs for the students at the University.

Toure Speech

Tension ran high on campus in November when activist Kwame Ture spoke to a crowd of 400 in Skinner Hall, interrupted by both standing ovations and exchanges with hecklers. Campus police ejected at least ten people from the packed lecture hall, but a group of 40 protestors remained, and hissed, yelled and gestured at Ture's speech. He urged blacks here to unite and educate themselves to fight capitalist oppression.

Aftermath

The death of Len Bias early on June 19, just two days after the Boston Celtics made the Terrapin forward their first pick in the NBA draft, spurred the campus and the country into an emotional welter of self-examination over drug use and academics in big-time college sports.

The months following Bias' cocaine overdose saw the formation of task forces to evaluate drug use on campus and academics among athletes; the appointment of a grand jury to investigate the clouded circumstances of Bias' death; and the start of a nationwide campaign to end drug use.

The Terrapin basketball team, which faced a shortened season that started three weeks after the rest of the nation, watched as Coach Lefty Driesell, though cleared of wrongdoing in the grand jury investigation, was forced to resign his post as men's basketball coach on October 29. Two days later the team lost one of two remaining starters as point guard Keith Gatlin was ruled ineligible to play after he was said to have violated student conduct rules by dropping and adding classes without an adviser's consent.

Dunbar High School basketball coach Bob Wade was quickly selected by Chancellor John Slaughter to replace Driesell. Wade was left with the unenviable task of building a team almost from scratch, but brought with him a reputation as a winning high school coach who kept a close eye on student-athletes' academics.

At the funeral service for Bias in the campus chapel, the Reverend Jesse Jackson call the 22-year old All-America forward a "blessing to our generation."

"God sometimes uses our best people to get our attention," Jackson said. "He called him to get the attention of this generation. On a day the children mourn, I hope they learn."

In December, just four months after the grand jury indicted former student Brian Tribble and Terrapin players Terry Long and David Gregg on drug possession charges, Leonise Bias returned to the campus where her son lived and died.

In an anti-drug lecture in the North Gym, she said, "You say Len's death was so untimely. It may have been untimely for the world, but it was timely for God. If you are supposed to go at 9:59, you are not going at 10. Len Bias left here on time. I believe it. I know it. And because of what I believe in, I know I'll see him again. And when I see him again, I'll never have to say goodbye again."

Football head coach Bobby Ross explodes at a referee in the final seconds of the Terps heart-breaking loss to North Carolina. After the Tar Heels kicked a 27-yard field goal, beating Maryland 32-30, Ross chased after the referee and grabbed him from behind. A North Carolina state trooper seperated the two.

The ensuing storm of controversy again focused the national spotlight on Maryland athletics. Ross was barred from the sidelines for the final home game against Clemson at Baltimore's Memorial Stadium.

Ross, frustrated with the 1986 season's 5-5-1 record and by University official's broken promises of improved facilities, quit at the season's end.

Lefty Gets The Ax

Men's basketball coach Charles G. "Lefty" Driesell's problems had only begun when Geogia Tech's last-second slam dunk knocked the Terps out of the ACC Tournament (left). Len Bias' cocaine-induced death led to a series of ugly allegations of sacrificing athletes' academics for the sake of winning games. A special committee called it a program gone "out of control."

Lefty's 17-year coaching career came to an inglorious end at a hastily called two-minute press conference. Maryland's most visible and controversial coach stepped down to accept a lucrative buy-out of his ten-year contract and a desk job in the athletic department.

Men's Lacrosse 1986

With a fourth-place ranking, the University Men's Lacrosse Team entered the 1986 NCAA tournament for the first time in three years. This was also their first appearance under the coaching of Dick Edell, former West Point coach.

Undefeated until their sudden-death loss (8-7) to the University of Virginia Cavaliers, the Terps climbed to number one in the national rankings after their mid-season come-from-behind win over the University of North Carolina Tarheels. The Terps also toppled Navy (11-8); University of New Hampshire (11-8); and Ohio Wesleyan (10-5).

The Terps made it into the eight-team NCAA playoffs only to watch Carolina avenge their mid-season defeat, knocking Maryland out of the playoffs. Terp midfielder Tom Worstell was named to the first team All-America; the only sophomore to make the team. Defender Brian Jackson and midfielder Brian Willard were both named third team All-America and defender Dan Tracy received honorable mention.

For the third straight year the Terrapin's Women's Lacrosse team made it to the finals of the NCAA championships. They knocked off the top-ranked Penn State Nittany Lions (11-10) to claim the 1986 National Championship

The Terps took control of the conference mid-season, after an uneven start with losses to Virginia and Harvard. But a rain-soaked regular season win over Penn State set the pace for the rest of the year.

In the playoffs the Terps beat out the nationally ranked Northwestern Wildcats and Virginia Cavaliers. Defense proved to be a key factor in both playoff and championship victories, especially that of Tracy Strumpf and goalie Kim Chorosiewski.

MARYLAND STATE GAMES

Almost 2,000 athletes from across the state came to campus one weekend early in August to compete in sports ranging from fencing to volleyball to table tennis in the second annual Maryland State Games. The competition was hot and heavy throughout the weekend as some of the state's best athletes competed against each other in 15 sports. The soccer tournament, track and field events, and field hockey competition generated the most spectator response, with campus athletes participating in the two latter events. Expansion is a key concept for the success of this program and each year new sports are expected to be involved in the competition. This year's additions being basketball, fencing, judo and table tennis.

P.S.

Well, what do you think? This year we tried to do something different with the yearbook. We wanted it to be more than just a pleasant but pointless scrapbook of smiling faces mugging for the camera. In a year that saw the death of Len Bias and a harsh spotlight of national attention focused on the University, we tried to record what it was all about.

This book is about photojournalism; trying to capture what's important, or funny, or grim, in pictures. Yearbook photographers covered everything from the annual Spring Break pilgrimage to Ft. Lauderdale to 3 a.m. cramming for finals to Len Bias' well-publicized funeral.

This campus holds more than 30,000 students, each seeing Maryland a little differently, with different experiences and perceptions. We can't show every single person's face, so rather we have tried to reflect the essence of the college experience. We hope you'll see yourself in that reflection.

College life isn't like high school, and a college yearbook shouldn't be like the one you got in high school. I'm hoping most people enjoy this book. Some may not. I only hope no one's bored with it.

-Paul Souders
Editor

Language Specialists

Latitude. That's what keeps a job invigorating —the chance to expand your interests, to take on unheard of challenges, to grow out as well as up. Well, that's precisely what the National Security Agency offers you as one of our people.

NSA performs three all-important tasks. We analyze foreign communications. We safeguard America's vital communications. We set security standards for the government's mammoth computer systems. And we want you in on the job.

NSA offers choices upon choices. In assignments. In projects. In careers. But whatever your role, it's going to make a difference; it's going to produce immediate results.

For an Electrical / Electronic / Computer Engineer options abound. In fact, the entire technological and functional spectrum are yours for exploration. Microprocessor implementation and programming, communications systems, LSI/VLSI, CAD/CAM, systems architecture and optics. Among others.

To the Computer Scientist, we deliver opportunities across the frontier of finite state machine development. The applications realm: systems design and programs, applications and evaluation, and computer security research and design.

Mathematicians research a variety of mathematical concepts including probability theory, statistics, Galois theory and group theory.

Language Specialists in Slavic, Near Eastern and Asian languages meet the challenges of translation, transcription and analysis head on. Every day.

Whatever your field, you can be certain to find many paths cleared for you. You'll also find a competitive salary, enticing benefits and an appealing suburban location between two vital urban centers—Washington and Baltimore.
